MEMORANDUM OF OPPOSITION

Re: A.10059 Paulin / S.7579 Savino
In relation to legalizing physician-assisted suicide

The above-referenced bill would add a new section of the Public Health Law to allow physicians to prescribe lethal doses of medication for the express purpose of ending a patient's life.

The New York State Catholic Conference opposes this bill for many reasons.

This newly-revised legislation contains many of the same fatal flaws contained in previous versions:

- it does not require screening or testing for clinical depression;
- it requires a physician to falsify the death certificate to list the underlying illness as the cause of death;
- it similarly requires insurance fraud by allowing beneficiaries to collect benefits following a suicide; and
- it encourages suicide “tourism” by allowing non-NYS residents to access physician-assisted suicide.

Moreover, on May 3, 2016, the Appellate Division of State Supreme Court ruled in the case of Myers vs. Schneiderman, declaring that New York's statutory ban on assisted suicide has plain meaning and clear language; there is no “carve-out” for medical reasons in assisting a suicide. Furthermore, the Court said there is a “rational” and “fundamental” difference between refusing life-saving medical treatment and receiving lethal drugs intended to cause death.

Legalizing physician-assisted suicide would:

- Blur longstanding medical, moral and legal distinctions between withdrawing extraordinary medical assistance and taking active steps to destroy human life. One lets people die a natural death; the other is the deliberate and direct act of hastening death.
- Undermine the physician's role as healer, forever alter the doctor-patient relationship, and lessen the quality of care provided to patients at the end of life. Patients are best served when medical professionals, together with families and loved ones, provide support and care with dignity and respect, not lethal doses of drugs. The American Medical Association holds a policy position against physician-assisted suicide, which they say is “fundamentally incompatible with the physician’s role” and would be “difficult or impossible to control.”

- Lead to psychological, financial and other pressures for vulnerable persons to end their lives. In today’s era of health care rationing and cost-cutting, physician-assisted suicide could easily rise to the level of the most acceptable, and even expected, “treatment” for terminal illness. In 1994, Governor Mario Cuomo’s Task Force on Life & the Law released a report unanimously rejecting assisted suicide, and cautioned:

“No matter how carefully any guidelines are framed, assisted suicide and euthanasia will be practiced through the prism of social inequality and bias that characterizes the delivery of services in all segments of society, including health care. The practices will pose the greatest risks to those who are poor, elderly, members of a minority group or without access to good medical care. The growing concern about health care costs increases the risks. This cost consciousness will not be diminished, and may well be exacerbated, by health care reform.”

Rather than assisting suicide, government should be consistent in its efforts to prevent suicide. It is illogical for the state to promote/facilitate suicide for one group of persons -- calling the suicides of those with a terminal illness and a specific prognosis “dignified and humane,” while recognizing suicide as a serious statewide public health concern in all other circumstances, and spending enormous resources to combat it.

We urge the state to remove barriers and improve access to palliative care and hospice care for those in the final stages of terminal illness. Improved education and training of physicians in pain management, together with appropriate diagnosis and treatment for depression, would go a long way toward eliminating calls for suicide among the sick and the dying.

We strongly urge you to oppose this bill.
